Downtown London chief bites back

City cuts. Warning issued to protect services as city budget is debated

"Don't bite the hand that feeds you," is the message for city council from Downtown London.

The organization's executive director, Janette MacDonald, has serious concerns about the 2014 city budget process.

And she's speaking out.

Already, council members have agreed to a $53,000 cut in support for Mainstreet London, a non-profit that helps pay for improvements downtown and is run by Downtown London.

Now, amid battles over the police request of a 3.3 per cent budget hike — eight votes at a city hall meeting Friday failed to find any agreement — MacDonald is worried there will be cuts to downtown police patrols and street cleaning.

"The city is looking to cut the cleaning budget downtown, and other things that "We need police to be visible so that people know downtown is a safe place."

Janette MacDonald, executive director for are going to affect the quality of life downtown, like the police budget," she said. "The police provide us with foot patrol. They recognize that downtown needs special treatment."

It may be special treatment, but MacDonald insists it's deserved.

"Downtown as it currently sits represents 0.2 per cent of the entire geographic area of the city of London, but that same area generates nine per cent of the property tax pile," she said.

"We're not asking them for special services. We're asking for things that are required, to keep the tremendous investment here.

"The suburbs aren't subsidizing us here. We're subsidizing the suburbs. We're asking for something that we paid for."

City budget meetings continue Thursday, with more to come before final decisions are made Feb. 27.

And an initial agreement for the $53,000 downtown cut was based on wrong information, MacDonald added, saying city staff told committee members the funding was for the Downtown Business Association, which has never had city money.

Provincial election could cost city taxpayers $2.5M

Recycling. City staff calculate financial effect on residents if Bill 91 fails

MIKE DONACHIE mike.donachie@metronews

There are rumblings about a possible provincial election in the spring, and the effect on Kathleen Wynne's Liberal government could be severe.

But, as the Tories and New Democrats weigh their options on how hard to push the minority government at Queen's Park, city staff in London have been weighing something else.

It's been decided the cost of an early election for the London taxpayer could be as much as $2.5 million.

Why? It's all about recycling.

Bill 91 — which, if it becomes law, will be called the Waste Reduction Act 2013 — seeks to shift the cost of recycling away from the taxpayer and onto industry. But the bill hasn't passed yet, and if there's an election, it won't. The process of creating the proposed law will begin again.

That, according to London's recycling chief, Jay Stanford, means London's taxpayers will have to keep paying a total of around $2.5 million every year.

"The way the legislation is currently worded and go-

Taxing details

- $300,000-$400,000:
 Amount typically paid by taxpayers towards recycling "household special waste" like paint and oil. Industry already pays 60 per cent of costs.
- $2 million: Approximate taxpayer portion of city's overall recycling costs. Industry already pays $8 million

ing through the discussion right now, that is our interpretation of the money that will come back to us in what they call a 'reasonable cost interpretation,'" said Stanford

He said the city's arrangement with a contractor is the best possible one for tax-payers, so it's "reasonable" to assume that Bill 91 will mean all of those costs will be imposed on the industries that create the items being recycled.

And it applies to all recycling — everything in those blue boxes. If someone makes the packaging that's being recycled, they will be expected to contribute to its recycling.

Stanford's explanation was also given, in report form, to council members at Monday night's civic works committee.

After some questions about the details, the committee noted the report and filed it.

Middlesex. 50-year-old man killed in apparent snowmobile accident

Police say a 50-year-old London man died after an apparent snowmobile crash early

Mark Hawkins was found dead when first responders arrived at the scene.

Details of what happened remain unclear, and the OPP technical traffic investigation team is investigating the sequence of events that lead to the incident.

Ontario Provincial Police, fire and EMS crews responded to a report of a crash involving a snowmobile at the back of a property on Wonderland Road just south of Ten Mile Road in Middlesex Centre.

A post-mortem examination is scheduled for Tuesday to determine the cause of death.

This is the ninth fatality in Middlesex OPP jurisdiction involving a snowmobile this season.

Chocolate company a golden ticket for London job market

It's a sweet deal for the local job market.

Chocolate maker Natra is taking a $2.8-million loan from the Southwestern Ontario Development Fund as it sets up its manufacturing facility in London, officials announced Monday.

The company makes chocolate bars, spreads and other specialty products at factories in Spain, France and Belgium. The new London facility will be part of Natra's consumer goods division and will create 56 new jobs in the city by early spring.

"I'm delighted that our government is investing in the food-processing sector and that Natra chose London for their expansion," London Centre MPP Deb Matthews said in a statement. "Supporting new jobs for our talented workers and making our local economy stronger will help us continue to attract global businesses to our community."

Natra Chocolate America

CEO Stephane Forrer said the London plant is strategic for the company's sales outlook.

"We're thankful for the support of the Ontario government and the people of this province," he said. "Our new production facility in London will help strengthen our North American footprint and increase the sales of our consumer goods division."

The plant will make about 12,000 tonnes of chocolate a year when operating at full capacity. METRO

1,000 RIDE stops and no charges

Checkpoints. Perfect Super Bowl Sunday contrasts with spike in '13 impaired-driving stats

There's good news and bad news for police and London MADD officials in the wake of Sunday's Super Bowl game.

Although many bars were packed full of football fans for kickoff early Sunday evening, the vast majority of them found safe ways to get home after the game ended.

With RIDE checkpoints set up throughout the day in numerous areas of the city, 1,000 vehicles were stopped and only five drivers were asked to take a breathalyzer test. None of them blew over the limit.

"This is a positive sign for us," said London police Sgt. Ryan Scrivens. "Hopefully, it's a testament to people planning ahead and making responsible choices to arrange sober transportation."

He noted it's a step in the right direction, but he's concerned with a 14 per cent increase in impaired-driving charges in 2013 compared to 2012.

"We've seen a steady decrease in impaired-driving charges over the past several years, but then we see a 14 per cent increase," he said. "Hopefully, moving into 2014 this (Sunday RIDE program) is a positive sign that we won't see an increase like that again."

Scrivens also said the spike may be partially due to an increase in the number of vehicles being checked at RIDE programs, as well as a media campaign encouraging motorists to call 911 if they suspect another driver of being impaired.

The Middlesex detachment of the OPP also conducted various RIDE stops Sunday, and they, too, issued no charges.

MADD spokeswoman Christine Taleski said the Super Bowl numbers are encouraging. Still, she stressed, close to 1,200 Canadians are killed each year as a result of alcohol-related crashes. SCOTT TAYLOR/METRO

Jackson files papers for second term. St. Thomas mayor first out of the gate

St. Thomas Mayor Heather Jackson will seek another term in office, she said Monday.

Jackson, who was elected in 2010, was the first person to announce a candidacy for either mayor or alderman in St. Thomas for the upcoming municipal election on Oct. 27.

Jackson said the issue of whether she would seek another term was being discussed, so she wanted to quell speculation as quickly as possible

"I do enjoy the job," she said. "I was getting a lot of questions of if I'm going to run again or not, so I thought let's get it out of the way. Yeah, definitely running again."

She listed accomplishments over the past four years and ambitions for a second term as reasons she feels voters will embrace her request to return to the big chair.

"We've accomplished a lot. We reinstated the position of (chief administrative officer), which has been great for the city. We've reinstated tourism locally, which is starting to explode this year and take off with some new events," she said.

Jackson said major funding has gone to improving roads and other infrastructure upgrades, as well.

Going forward, she said she's excited about plans for the development of Talbot Street, something she said is a pet project of hers.

'No shortage of dumb policies.' Government asked to make deep cuts

The Canadian Taxpayers Federation is urging the Ontario government to slash $13 billion in spending to balance the books in 2014 and start paying down some of the province's record debt.

Ontario's debt doubled during 10 years of Liberal rule to $272.8 billion, said CTF director Candice Malcolm

"There are real consequences to carrying this much debt," she said. "This is the third-largest and fastest-growing expenditure in our budget."

The government can't afford to keep shelling out more in interest charges without actually making payments to lower the debt, added Malcolm.

"This is just a small part of the debt that we owe, which also includes federal debt and most of us owe municipal debt plus any personal debt," she said. "When you look at the larger debt component, for people in Ontario it's quite scary."

Malcolm says the government could save $2.7 billion by ending "corporate welfare" grants to businesses and could save even more by killing the full-day kindergarten program for fourand five-year-olds.

"There are unfortunately no shortage of dumb policies here in Ontario," she said

The taxpayers' lobby also wants the government to end the 10 per cent rebate on electricity bills, saying it costs $1 billion a year, and to kill the 30 per cent ruition discount for most college and university students.

It also wants the controversial Green Energy Act repealed and the Liquor Control Board privatized.

Failure to provide suitable and adequate care. Woman sentenced 14 years after animalcruelty charges laid

There were 29 dogs living in conditions so deplorable it's difficult to even imagine, yet the woman who kept them there managed to evade justice for 14 long years.

Boy was chained up, starved, beaten: Crown

A 10-year-old boy who died in the care of his father and stepmother was kept chained to his bed, stomped on and starved, prosecutors alleged Monday in the first day of the couple's murder

Autopsy results showed "injuries on top of injuries" and open wounds on Shakeil Boothe's emaciated body, as well as clear signs of infection in his lungs and blood stream, Crown lawyer Kelly Slate told a Toronto-area

The boy's death was caused by a combination of blunt-force injuries, malnutrition, pneumonia and other infections, she said in her opening statement.

Shakeil's lifeless body was found on May 27, 2011, in the family's Brampton, Ont., home, court heard.

The boy's father, Garfield Boothe, and stepmother, Nichelle Boothe-Rowe, are charged with second-degree

Garfield Boothe was originally charged with failing to provide the necessities of life but that charge was later upgraded to second-degree murder.

Nichelle Boothe-Rowe was previously facing a manslaughter charge.

Shakeil left his grandmother's care in Jamaica in 2009 to come live with his father in search of a better life, Slate said. Instead, he was dead within two years of his arrival.

Slate said the boy was an "obviously sick, malnourished child" at the time of his death.

"Shakeil did not get to that state overnight."

Boothe and Boothe-Rowe "had an obligation to care for their 10-year-old son once he came to Čanada," she said.

But things changed once the couple had a son of their own — an infant born in September of 2010, Slate argued.

Neighbours noticed Shakeil, previously viewed as a "happy but shy and quiet boy," wasn't seen playing outside or going to school, she said. They were told he was inside playing video games, she said.

And public health nurses who visited to help Boothe-Rowe with the baby "saw no sign of another child living in the house," Slate said.

Boothe called 911 the afternoon of May 27 to report Shakeil wasn't conscious or

PUTTING SEXY BACK IN SEXAGENARIAN

I've always hated the phrase "a woman of a certain age." It implies that once a woman has reached a point in her life when she is no longer considered youthful, her exact age is simply unspeakable.

Many of my friends turning 30 this year (although some prefer to think of it as the first anniversary of their 29th birthday) and while I still have while to go before hit that milestone, I've already started noticing some of the inevitable signs of aging. At my mother's insistence, I recently began a nightly ritual involving anti-aging creams infused with retinol and other gravity-defying serums that I'm convinced have a bigger impact on my bank account than my face.

In honour of her 60th birthday, Christie Brinkley appeared on the cover of this week's People magazine looking absolutely flawless—albeit a bit unnaturally smooth—clad in a bold one-piece bathing suit.

SHE SAYS

metronews.ca

Part of me wants to believe that there is an aging portrait of Brinkley rotting away in an attic somewhere, but the blond bombshell insists that her mostly vegan lifestyle and a "joie de vivre" are what keep her looking like a fresh-faced supermodel. Plus her rigorous exercise routine, monthly facials, numerous hair extensions and, of course, a little help from Adobe Photoshop.

Brinkley isn't the only sexagenarian baring her body in the news this week. American Apparel—a clothing retailer renowned for their envelope-pushing campaigns featuring lithe bodies in leotards—recently revealed a new lingerie ad featuring 62-year-old model Jacky O'Shaughnessy. Unlike Brinkley's magazine cover, this image shows a woman with grey hair, lines on her face and folds in her stomach, and she still looks like a total babe. O'Shaughnessy probably has incredible genetics on her side and — if I had to guess — a lifetime dedication to sunscreen, but looking at these striking images of a silver-haired beauty in lace underwear and bright red lipstick gives me hope for the future.

It's refreshing to see women like O'Shaughnessy in the media embracing their age rather than desperately trying to reconstruct their face into some unrecognizable Botox-filled version of their former selves. The older women in my life are some of the most beautiful people I know. Not because they are trying to look younger and deny their true age, but because they take pride in their appearance. When my great aunt passed away last year I can remember admiring how elegant she looked in the hospital bed dressed in her finest pearls, nails polished and her hair immaculately coiffed.

Aging can be a difficult process to come to terms with, but I would rather be who I am now than turn back the clock 10 years. I'll accept that teenage pimples give way to adult wrinkles and feel fortunate that I have such great memories be-

Brazil's dark cloud makes waves

Microscopic life

An ominous-looking dark blotch has been spotted stretching 800 km along Brazil's Atlantic coast.

The black formation, pictured by Aqua, a NASA satellite that monitors Earth's water cycle, is actually a bloom made up of microscopic animals known as Myrionecta rubra. Viewed close up, the bloom is red, but a distortion of light on the water means it looks black from orbit. METRO

What is marine bloom?

- Definition. Fast accumulation in the population of algae in water.
- Concentration. Up to millions of cells per millilitre.
- Cause. Result of an excess of nutrients into waters. Higher concentrations of these nutrients lead to increased growth of algae and green plants.

Microorganisms steal from algae

Living a metre below the water surface, Myrionecta rubra are dubbed the thieves of the microbial world: Using a "straw," these fast-swimming unicellular organisms suck out chlorophyll from other algae, and then use the pigment for photosynthesis in order to obtain energy. However, Myrionecta rubra are not known to be toxic to other marine life or humans. METRO

Risk factor

Certain algal blooms can threaten other aquatic organisms and the safety of human drinking water. Blooms can cause damage by blocking sunlight and depleting oxygen required by other aquatic organisms, as well as produce potent toxins that can cause adverse health effects to wildlife and humans.

Dallas Buyers Club

Director. Jean-Marc Vallee

Stars. Matthew McConaughey, Jennifer Garner, Jared Leto

. . . .

Matthew McConaughey becomes a hero to the afflicted and a villain to outraged authorities in this fact-based 1980s story of a Texas rodeo playboy who refuses to go quietly after HIV cuts him low. McConaughey lost some 40 pounds for the role of redeemable rogue Ron Woodroof, playing him with a faultless blend of vinegar and honey. Jared Leto is the other hero of this David versus Goliath drama, directed by Quebec's Jean-Marc Vallée. McConaughey and Leto have both been nominated for Oscars, deservedly so, at the March 2 Academy Awards.

Stamped drug bags found at Hoffman's house

A law enforcement official says tests have confirmed there was heroin in at least some of the dozens of plastic packets in a New York City apartment where Philip Seymour Hoffman was found dead.

Officials are working to determine whether the drug was mixed or tainted with anything else. An autopsy was being conducted Monday. Police have been investigating Hoffman's death as an apparent overdose. Law enforcement officials said he was found with a needle in his arm.

Two officials said Monday that at least four dozen small packets were found in the apartment. Some of the one-dose packets were stamped with the ace of hearts symbol, and others with the words "Ace of Spades" and that symbol, another law enforcement official said.

Stamps are common as a form of drug-world branding.

Hoffman's Hunger Games role to remain untouched

'Devastating loss.'

Actor's castmates and co-workers mourn loss, but Hoffman's role in his final films will remain intact save for a small rewrite

RICHARD CROUSE scene@metronews.ca

The news of Philip Seymour Hoffman's sudden passing was met with a heartfelt outpouring of grief from fans and those who worked with him.

"Philip Seymour Hoffman was a singular talent and one of the most gifted actors of our generation," Lionsgate, the studio behind the upcoming Hunger Games: Mocking-jay Part 1 and 2, said in a written statement. "We're very fortunate that he graced our Hunger Games family. Losing him in his prime is a tragedy, and we send our deepest condolences to Philip's family."

Hoffman played head-games-maker-turned-rebel leader Plutarch Heavensbee in the successful series. It is a pivotal role.

In the wake of the actor's death, questions arose as to whether the uncompleted blockbusters-in-waiting would be completed in time for their scheduled November 21, 2014 for Part 1 and November 20, 2015 for Part 2 release dates.

Hollywood studios have handled the sudden death of cast members in many different ways. In some cases, films are even abandoned.

Production on Something's Got to Give was shut down permanently after Marilyn Monroe's August 1962 barbiturate overdose.

Dark Blood, River Phoenix's final film, was put into cold storage when the young actor died before filming several crucial scenes. But both movies were eventually resurrected. The documentary Marilyn: The Final Days used footage from Monroe's aborted film while Dark Blood sat for 19 years before being finished and shown at film festivals.

Father and son Bruce and Brandon Lee both died early, leaving behind unfinished films. The elder martial arts legend had completed 100 minutes of The Game of Death when a cerebral edema took his life.

Even more tragically, Brandon was killed on the set of The Crow in an accident involving a prop handgun.

Both films were salvaged with the use of stand-ins.

When Oliver Reed collapsed of a heart attack at a Malta pub after out-drinking a group of Royal Navy sailors, the editing crew of Gladiator replaced him digitally in the remaining scenes of the film.

More recently, Heath Ledger unexpectedly died during the production of The Imaginarium of Dr. Parnassus. He was replaced in the surreal story by three actors.

"I just started calling friends of Heath," director Terry Gilliam said. "It's as simple as that."

"Johnny (Depp), Colin (Farrell) and Jude (Law) turned up. It was important that they were friends, because I wanted to keep it in the family. I wanted people who were close to him because, as Colin said when he was doing his part, he was channelling Heath part of the time, so Heath was very much still alive in some sense.

"Contractually, it was supposed to be a Terry Gilliam Film," said Gilliam. "That's what the lawyers said, but I said, 'No way it's going to be that. It's going to be a film from Heath Ledger and friends.' The cast sat around one night and that idea came up and I said, 'This is it. Perfect. That's how we do it.'"

As for the upcoming Hunger Games films, reports now confirm that Hoffman completed work on Part 1 and had just seven days left of shooting on Part 2.

His absence will not require any recasting, just a rewrite of one scene. And so Mockingjay Part 2 becomes the final film in Hoffman's remarkable career.

"Words cannot convey the devastating loss we are all feeling right now. Philip was a wonderful person and an exceptional talent, and our hearts are breaking," reads a statement released by The Hunger Games author Suzanne Collins, the films' director Francis Lawrence, producers Nina Jacobson and Jon Kilik and star Jennifer Lawrence.

Broadway theatres in New York City will dim their marquee lights Wednesday night in memory of Philip Seymour Hoffman, the movie and theatre star who earned three Tony Award nominations. The Broadway League said Monday the lights will be dimmed for one minute starting at 7:45 p.m. Eastern time. Hoffman made his Broadway debut in Sam Shepard's True West with John C. Reilly in 2000 and followed it up three years later with Eugene O'Neill's Long Dav's Journey Into Night with Brian Dennehy and Vanessa Redgrave. In 2012, he played a powerful Willy Loman in Death of a Salesman by Arthur Miller under the direction of Mike Nichols. Each time he earned a Tony nod. OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Think Miley's act is offensive? She doesn't give a Cyrus

MELINDA TAUB

etro World New

Miley Cyrus could either be the next Madonna or the next Howard Hughes. The next Michael Jackson or the next, well, Michael Jackson. In other words, she could be an enduring superstar or completely flame out, and a new profile by Ronan Farrow (who knows a few things about growing up in a celebrity bubble) in W makes both possibilities seem equally likely.

Among the details we learn about Miley: She apparently hates to leave her house, doesn't listen to people unless they're talking about music, and relates strongly to Blanche Dubois, the mentally frail heroine of A Streetcar Named Desire.

Some of the things Miley doesn't like to listen to are the accusations that her act, which frequently involves spanking and groping women of colour and little people, is offensive. "I don't give a s—," she says. "I'm not Disney, where they have, like, an Asian girl, a black girl, and a white girl, to be politically correct, and, like, everyone has bright-coloured T-shirts. You know, it's like, I'm not making any kind of statement. Anyone that hates on you is always below you, because they're just jealous of what you have."

Probably it's not a great idea to respond to accusations of racism with, "You're below me." That could be misconstrued. Or correctly construed.

Miley's own cast, though, also spoke out in her defense.

"I say, 'Bah, humbug' to that," African American backup dancer Amazon Ashley says to critics. "Miley treats me with the utmost respect. Twerking is my act. It's what I enjoy; it's who I am."

Little person Brittney Guzman agrees. "When she grabs my boobs, we're just having fun," she says. "It's not degrading."

"We're just having fun" has never sounded so creepy.

Is a new romance in full Bloom for Orlando?

While Orlando Bloom has been enjoying possibly the most amicable divorce in Hollywood history with his split from Miranda Kerr, he also appears to finally be entertaining new prospects again. Bloom was spotted recently at L.A. bar the Roger Room with French actress Nora Arnezeder, and though he was on his best behaviour sources could tell something was up, according to People magazine. "Orlando was there just with a girl and not in a group," a source says. "He knew that there were paparazzi outside so he was being very careful about his behaviour with her." The pair later shared a ride home on his motorcycle.

Recovering tweetaholic Mayer has fallen off the webbed wagon

Look out, Twitter. John Mayer is back on the scene. After making a big deal of quitting the social media forum back in 2010, Mayer logged back on over the weekend with a cheerful, "Tm back. What'd I miss?" His return might have something to do with the fact that his girlfriend, Katy Perry, is the most popular person on Twitter. Or maybe he's gotten over his Twitter-induced writer's block. In 2011, Mayer explained why he had to quit Twitter: "I realized about a year ago that I couldn't have a complete thought anymore, and I was a tweetaholic," he said. "I had four million Twitter followers, and I was always writing on it. And I stopped using Twitter as an outlet and I started using Twitter as the instrument to riff on, and it started to make my mind smaller and smaller and smaller and smaller and smaller write a song."

Don't let your 2014 resolutions fizzle out

One month in.

Whether it's working out or breaking a habit, there are ways to get back on track

MELISSA DUNNE

Mark Twain saw the glass as half empty in terms of New Year's resolutions. In January 1863, he wrote "Now is the accepted time to make your regular annual good resolutions. Next week you can begin paving hell with them as usual."

It turns out the great American writer wasn't far off the mark. Research by John Norcross, a professor of psychology at the University of Scranton, found 29 per cent of resolvers had already failed 14 days in and by February that number jumps to 36 per cent.

Mere hours into Jan. 1, I was guzzling Diet Coke straight from a bottle left over from a holiday party, though giving up the stuff was my resolution.

Like many Canadians, my desire to stick to my New Year's resolution quickly fizzled.

The first mistake I made in January was failing to modify my environment, says Norcross. Having soda in the house was akin to walking outside in six-inch heels after a polar vortex and expecting not to slip.

On Jan. 2, I should have poured the pop down the drain, not down my throat. But my will to try went flat and I was back to drinking about two litres of caramel-coloured, aspartame-spiked, carbonated syrup per day.

This was another classic resolver mistake.

"A little slip is not a total fall," said Norcross, a man who has literally written the book on making changes stick.

You will slip. The trick is to dust yourself off and try again, not lie on the ground surrounded by empty pop bottles. Norcross points out a study that showed 71 per cent of eventually successful resolvers said their first slip actually strengthened their resolve.

On Jan. 9, I resolved to white-knuckle my bête-noire anew, determined not to turn red from the embarrassment of failing this time. So far, I have crushed my habit like those thin aluminum

So far, I have crushed my habit like those thin aluminum cans that used to fill my recycling bin. While Norcross' research shows by Canada Day 56 per cent of resolvers have given up, that means 44 per cent are still bubbling with optimism.

Twain be damned, in 2014 I'm going to see my glass as half full of soda ... water, thank you very much.

Get your financial future in shape

Savings advice. Two main vehicles available as you map out personal financial goals

VAN BUUREN

"Every January, Canadians start thinking about getting fit. And every February, even though we should be thinking about it all year, most Canadians start thinking about retirement," says Dean Owen, a Saskatoon-based financial adviser with Advocis, the Financial Advisors Association of Canada.

Two important retirement savings vehicles are the registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) and the tax-free savings account (TFSA).

RRSPs were introduced by the federal government in 1957 to allow you to save for the future on a tax-sheltered basis. A big advantage is that contributions are tax deductible the year they are made, Owen said.

"And that gives you an immediate break on your tax

But you will have to pay tax when you withdraw funds from your RRSP down the road. The amount is added to your income that year and taxed at regular rates. There may also be old age security clawbacks based on income.

"Withdrawing from your RRSP may push you into an income bracket where old age security is reduced."

The TFŠA was introduced in 2008 and is also a registered account with the federal government. The benefit of a TFSA is that it allows your investment income and capital gains to grow tax-free,

"You're never taxed on the growth, and any withdrawal is tax-free.'

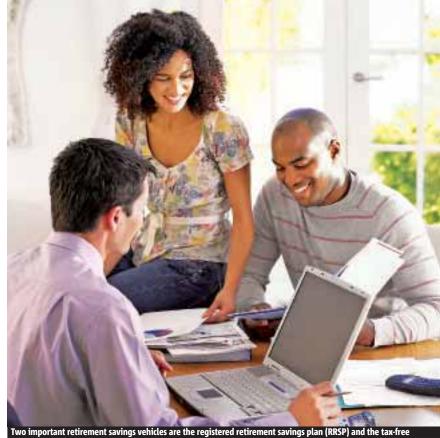

Also, TFSA funds will not affect eligibility for federal income benefits such as old age

The main disadvantage for many people is that TFSA contributions are not tax deductible when you contribute the RRSP or TFSA?

It can be tough to balance the benefits against the disadvantages of both, Owen said. What's important is that you look at both in relation to your personal financial goals and situation.

"My general recommendation is that people with an income over $50,000 invest in both RRSPs and TFSAs. But if your income is below $40,000, an RRSP may not be your first or best choice."

savings account (TFSA). BIKERIDERLONDON/SHUTTERSTOCK

Understanding RRSPs

The registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) is a popular vehicle for Canadians to save money on a tax-deferred basis for their retirement.

But RRSPs are not a retirement panacea, and there are a few things investors should be aware of and avoid when it comes to their plans.

"It's really important to understand RRSPs, their benefits, why you should contribute and what you shouldn't do," said Chris Buttigieg, senior manager of wealth planning strategy with BMO Financial Group.

"A lot of people make con-tributions but don't really understand some of the consequences of RRSPs, such as early withdrawals and benefits like tax-deferred growth."

Perhaps the biggest no-no associated with RRSPs is to withdraw money for any reason other than investing in the first-time homebuyers or lifelong learning plans, which allow you to withdraw certain amounts of money from your RRSP to buy your first home or go back to school and repay it within a certain period of time without paying tax.

The government taxes other early withdrawals very heavily. And there are other penalties.

Once you withdraw the money it is considered income and will be added to your total income, which you are taxed on as well.

Once you have withdrawn the money it is removed from the contribution room available to you and you cannot re-contribute it later.

Many RRSP investors make their contributions to get their tax refund but end up leaving the money sitting in cash where it will make little or no interest. It makes sense to talk to a financial adviser about building a portfolio in your RRSP to maximize gains and limit risk.

"Once you've made your contribution and get your refund why not apply it to some debt like a mortgage or invest it in a tax-free savings account it's like hitting two birds with one stone," Buttigieg said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

HOW TO JUGGLE

Looking for a part-time job while juggling classes and homework can be a challenge. Tang Choy, an employment support counsellor from Ryerson University's Career Centre, has numerous tips that will help students cut their job search time in half.

Spread the word. Let your family, friends and acquaintances know that you are looking for part-time work and indicate your area of interest. Remember, if your connections don't know that you are seeking employment, they can't help. Apply the 80/20 rule when sharing your job search progress with your social network online — 80 per cent of your updates should benefit/help others, and the other 20 per cent can be selfpromotional.

Research and prepare. Target your job search by researching companies you want to work for, and remember that everyone you meet could potentially have a job for you. Prepare and rehearse a 30-second pitch that you can use on a prospective employer to highlight your relevant skills and experience.

Tailor your resumé and cover letter. Use key words in your resumé and cover letter that are included in the job description.

Look on- and off-campus. Check out employment opportunities on campus, and talk to your professors to see if they can use an extra hand. Off campus, visit company websites and connect with professionals in the field. Also consider staffing agencies that provide opportunities for temporary work. - Metro News Services

KING'S UNIVERSITY

By offering students the chance to take part in international programs, King's University is hoping to foster a sense of global awareness among its students.

Whether students are studying in the liberal arts and sciences, business or a professional program, they need to be prepared to work within a global economy.

"Students today are living in an interconnected world and require the skills to interact with and understand their neighbour next door, who may be quite different than themselves, as well as a business partner or colleague who may be living in another part of the world," says Dr. Linda Weber, manager, King's International.

"The ability to respect and understand commonalities and differences across nations and cultures is a fundamental attitude and skill for all students to develop."

The Forest City club is more than 20 years old.

Lightning lose Phillips to France

One of the most recognizable faces of the London Lightning is leaving the franchise.

Marvin Phillips, the National Basketball League of Canada's 2013 MVP, is headed to France to further his career, the team said in a statement.

"It has truly been a great run here in London. I am thankful for all the love and support you all gave me during my entire stay," Phillips said. "This is a chance I have to take."

The departure is a "huge loss" for the team, Lightning general manager Taylor Brown said.

"From a financial perspective, this was a decision Marvin had to make," he added. metro

Expos dominate hall of fame class

Montreal moments.

Former major leaguer Wallach heads 2014 list of inductees

DAVE LANGFORD

The Montreal Expos baseball franchise may be dead as we know it, but the memories will live on forever.

And the Canadian Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum is doing its share in not letting us forget. The hall announced its 2014 inductees on Monday and three of the four have strong Montreal connections.

From the Expos, long-time third baseman Tim Wallach, former general manager Murray Cook and legendary Expo broadcaster Dave Van Horne all will be inducted in the hall of fame on June 21 in St. Marys.

Canadian national team

Inductees at a glance

- Tim Wallach is the Expos' all-time leader in several statistical categories, including games played (1,767), hits (1,694), doubles (360), RBIs (905) and total bases (2,728). He also ranks third all-time among Expos in runs (737) and fourth in home runs (204). In 2014, he will serve as the Los Angeles Dodgers bench coach.
- Dave Van Horne calls games for the Miami Marlins now, but for hundreds of thousands of Canadians, he will always be the voice of the Montreal Expos. Behind the mic for the Expos' first game on April 8, 1969, until the end of the 2000 season, Van Horne became known for his smooth baritone and trademark catch-phrases like "Up, up and away!" when the Expos hit a home run.

Murray Cook was named general manager of the Expos in 1983, becoming just the second Canadian to be a big league GM (Huntsville, Ont., native George Selkirk was the Washington Senators' GM from 1964 to 1969). He remains just one of five Canadians to serve as a GM at the major league level.

Jim Ridley was a scout for the Blue Jays for 26 years. He also coached the Canadian junior national team from 1983 to 1988, leading the squad to bronze medals at the world junior baseball championship in 1983 and 1987. In 1988, he coached the Canadian Olympic baseball team and three years later, he was chosen to manage Canada's squad at the Pan Am Games.

coach and long-time scout Jim Ridley will also be inducted posthumously.

"Tim Wallach and Dave Van Horne are two names that have become synonymous with the Montreal Expos, and both have had a significant impact on baseball in this country, and Murray Cook and Jim Ridley helped blaze a trail for Canadians in the professional scouting and executive ranks," said Scott Crawford, the hall's director of operations.

The induction ceremony will be part of a June festival that will also include a celebrity slo-pitch game and home-run derby, a London Salutes Canadian Baseball breakfast, the hall's 18th annual celebrity golf tournament and a Toronto Blue Jays camp for kids.

'The pressure's clearly on them'

Ice hockey. Great things expected from Ovechkin and Malkin's Russians as they enter Sochi as 'centrepiece' of Games

Friends and family have been calling Alex Ovechkin and Evgeni Malkin for months, asking about Olympic tickets and wanting to know who was going to be on the Russian team.

"I field questions about Sochi always," Malkin said. "I feel right now it's pressure for the team, for me. It's everyone."

The Sochi Olympics are a showcase of a generation for Russia and Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, and with that comes the pressure of a lifetime for those taking part in the event the country believes it must win.

"I don't think about it because I don't want to take pressure right now on me," Ovechkin said last month. "But it's kind of hard to do. Every time when I go to the news and on the Internet, I just see about the Olympic Games."

From a hockey standpoint, that means attention on Ovechkin, Malkin, captain Pavel DatyParallels of pressure

"We can relate, for sure. It wasn't that long ago, and we all know how proud of a hockey nation Russia is, too."

suk and NHL-star-turned-KHLhero Ilya Kovalchuk, and the expectation of gold on Feb. 23 at Bolshoy Ice Dome. Anything less isn't an option the Russians want to consider.

It's similar to what Canada went through in Vancouver in 2010 with a need to show dominance in a national sport. Given that Russia hasn't won gold since 1992, when it played as the Unified Team, there's even more anxiety.

"I think that always goes with the territory," U.S. general manager David Poile said. "It's probably even more so because starting from the top with Putin, he's wanted these Olympics; the centrepiece is the hockey. The whole Sochi is sort of a man-made area, if you will, just for the Olympics.

"They're putting literally billions of dollars into this, and there's no question that the hockey is the centrepiece of the Olympics. The pressure's clearly on them. We're going to see the best of the Russians, that's for sure."

Canada proved four years ago that pressure isn't prohibitive to winning; that being at home can be an incentive.

With the whole world watching them in their country, the Russians hope they, too, can capitalize on the homeice advantage. And Ovechkin believes that mentality is his team's biggest strength.

"(The) most important thing is (it's) us against the whole world," said Ovechkin, who dreamed as a child of representing Russia in a home Olympics. "I don't think somebody is going to be there ... to be just in the Olympic Games. Our mission is try to win the gold medal and play our best hockey."

Thomsen at his best when he's tuned out tond-place linish in Social during the 2012 season. Ji

The biggest moment of Ben Thomsen's racing career came two years ago in Sochi.

After a tough start to this season, the Canadian alpine skier is hoping to find some of that magic on the same Russian mountain at the Olympics.

Thomsen finished a surprising second at a World Cup downhill event back in February 2012, a result the 22-year-old believes will give him an edge at the Games.

"I'm definitely confident going back there. It was a huge part of my life and changed my life drastically," Thomsen said.

"Georgia is on the back side of the ski hill and getting off gondola stations, you've got five armed guards ... it's a bit nervewracking and unwelcoming when you're from a place like Canada."

"It will be interesting to see what kind of feelings and emotions come up when I get there."

The Invermere, B.C., native has had a mixed bag of results during his career, threatening the podium at some events while struggling badly at others. Thomsen's recipe for success seems to be simple — don't over think it.

"As I look back on my career, the times that I've done really well is when I don't really know what I'm about to face and I'm just going into it full bore," he said. "If I know a situation might be a little tricky I might kind of back off the throttle a little bit."

After missing the first three Winter Games, Alpine skiing joined the program in 1936. Ten gold medals will be awarded in Sochi in men's and women's downhill, slalom, giant slalom, super-G and super combined.

Cross-country skiing

Tough decisions ahead in Norway

Norway's unrivaled depth in cross-country skiing is causing the team some problems ahead of the Sochi Olympics.

With a handful of medal contenders in nearly every event, the Norwegians face the prospect of having to drop either a double Olympic champion or a former world champion from the men's individual sprint race.

Each team can enter four skiers, and Norway's coaches have already promised spots to three athletes. The fourth was set to go to Petter Northug, the team's big star who has struggled with illness this season.

But that would mean leaving out former sprint world champion Ola Vigen Hattestad in the fourth spot. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
